A MESSAGE FROM FR STINNETT

Last week, Father Dooley wrote a very touching piece about his family's tradition of honoring his deceased family members, which is part of the month of November set aside by the Church as a special time of prayer for the Poor Souls in Purgatory. The belief in Purgatory is something that sets us apart as Catholics from our Protestant brothers and sisters, many of whom do not believe in the transitory state wherein the last sins and attachments that our hearts have to this world are purified, so that we are ready for the perfection of Heaven.

The Catholic Church's belief in Purgatory comes from an Old Testament book that we might not be super familiar with, the Second Book of Maccabees. I don't think I had ever read any of it until I was in seminary. The passage that is the center of the Church's belief in Purgatory is 2 Maccabees 12:38-46. As a short summary, Judas Maccabeus, the main character of the book, has been leading his small army of Jewish rebels against the Greek forces that have overtaken Judea and forced the Jewish people to assimilate into Hellenistic culture, which meant giving up the practices that God commanded His chosen people to keep, such as having only one God, keep kosher, and circumcision. Judas and his band of fighters go to collect the bodies of the dead after the battle at the city of Adullam. But, on some of the bodies of the dead, they find amulets to pagan gods. These soldiers died in a state of sin, the sin of idolatry.

Maybe we can be sympathetic to these men. After all, they were fighting for Israel against fierce odds. They were defending their homeland, their traditions, and their God. But, there was a part of their hearts that was not attached to God all the way. The amulets, which asked the protection of the pagan idols, were a way of hedging their bets. The soldiers were asking God and any god to protect them. We do this all the time too. We love God. We desire to serve Him and indeed we do, but do we pour out our everything for God, or do we keep some of it in reserve? Are our hearts still attached to other things, other places that give us comfort and rest, other "idols" that take up room in our hearts?

Judas Maccabeus and his companions sent a donation to the temple in Jerusalem for a sacrifice to be offered in the Temple for these fallen soldiers. Verses 45 and 46 read: "But if he did this with a view to the splendid reward that awaits those who had gone to rest in godliness, it was a holy and pious thought. Thus, he made atonement for the dead that they might be absolved from their sin." Judas' prayers and sacrifice were efficacious even for the dead. Ours can be too.

The Catholic Church invites us in this month of November in particular to pray for, offer Masses and sacrifices for, and gain indulgences for the dead – those who are in Purgatory, those who are being purified so that there is nothing their hearts cling to except for God. Purgatory is evidence of God's infinite mercy. If God was not merciful, almost all of us would end up in Hell, because there are few of us who die having reached perfection. And yet, Jesus is clear that this is the standard for our entrance to Heaven: "So be perfect, just as your heavenly Father is perfect" (Mt. 5:48). Purgatory is the place where we receive God's mercy to finally be purified, to be made perfect if we were not in this life. We, too, cooperate in God's mercy every time we show mercy, as Jesus says just a few verses above: "Blessed are the merciful, for they will be shown mercy" (Mt 5:7). Our prayers, our sacrifices, our indulgences applied to the dead, are ways that we, as the Church on earth, are still linked with the Church in Purgatory, and when those souls in Purgatory are ready for Heaven, we then have another link to the Church in Heaven. Let us not despair in the face of death, but let us pray for everyone who has died, so when our time comes, we know others will be praying for us.

LOVE DOES NOT COMPARE

The more I practice my faith, the more I am tempted to believe that I am somehow spiritually ahead of others. It's logical in a way. Those who jog every day tend to be more fit than those who don't. Those who spend hours in study tend to be more learned than those who spend the same amount of time on entertainment. Yet when it comes to the spiritual life, any feelings of superiority are illogical and a great deficiency.

For me, the deficiency has taken many forms. When I was volunteering regularly at a soup line, for example, I would find myself thinking, "Hey, where's everybody else?" Or, during Holy Thursday Mass, I'd question why the entire parish didn't show up. I delved into contemplative prayer at one point and thought those who practiced it were somehow part of the "spiritual elite"—a contradiction of terms, no doubt!

Whatever I thought I had accomplished through such disciplines, it clearly was not "faith working through love," as St Paul describes it. According to St Teresa of Avila, the best way to measure our love for God is through our love of neighbor. But how can I claim to love my neighbor if I slip into silly spiritual competitions with them?

Love does not compare itself to others. Such spiritual judgments divide rather than unite. If I start thinking I'm better than others, I stop growing closer to God. Instead, I must focus my prayer on loving God and my action on serving others. Comparisons stop making sense when I love my neighbor as I love myself.

November 10, 2024 | Thirty-second Sunday in Ordinary Time

1 Kgs 17:10-16 | Heb 9:24-28 | Mk 12:38-44 or 12:41-44

GROW AS A DISCIPLE | PRAY, STUDY, ENGAGE, SERVE

"Give it your all! Leave it all on the field! Trust in your training/preparation/coaches." We've all heard a version of this type of exhortation. It requires a great amount of confidence and trust – faith, if you will – to let go of our doubt and fears. The two widows of today's readings had such confidence, as they offer us heroic examples of faith. The widow of Zarephath uses her only remaining food to cook for Elijah. She did this after receiving God's promise that, "The jar of flour shall not go empty, nor the jug of oil run dry." The widow had the assurance that God would sustain her, and she lived by it – trusting she could give her all, because with God's help there would be more. Likewise, the widow in the Gospel could make an offering to the temple treasury because of her limitless confidence in God: she gave "her whole livelihood." From that moment, she would have nothing to sustain her but God's providential care. By their unreserved acts of generosity, both women consented to rely on God in the most absolute sense. And in so doing, they silently proclaimed their faith in the personal and unconditional love that God had for each of them.

GO EVANGELIZE | PRAYER, INVITATION, WITNESS, ACCOMPANIMENT

So deeply did these two women believe in God's goodness that they were able to act without fear. Confident in his love, they could give to the point of having nothing left. They, literally, "gave it all that they had." Rather than being burdensome, however, their surrender was the basis of their relationship with God and therefore, it was a much greater treasure than material goods. This message is clearly at odds with the notion that possessions and wealth are the basis of happiness. By rejecting this idea, giving generously of ourselves and trusting God to sustain us, we gain more than we could ever give up. Like the widow whose jar never runs dry, when we fill our lives with what God offers and not what the world offers, we live with abundance.
